It only gets better hereon; order inflow remains key metric

BHEL reported its highest quarterly order inflow of INR 145bn in Q1FY24 and is L1 in ~INR 80bn worth of orders. We expect order inflow for FY24E and FY25E to be >INR 400bn aided by improving order prospects for thermal coal. We believe India needs to add 5GW per year for next 15 years. We estimate 50GW of coal-based capacity to be >40 years old by FY32. India peak demand is expected to be 375GW by FY32 at 6% CAGR, or 330GW at 5% CAGR. To meet this additional peak demand, government is looking to add 75GW of storage and 50GW of thermal capacity. Note that storage is still at a nascent stage and ~20% of operational capacity will have aged to >40 years by 2032. In our opinion, India will therefore need to enhance its arsenal of thermal power plants to ensure smooth energy transition. As a result, BHEL is expected to remain a key beneficiary.

Near-term pipeline of coal power plants

The near-term pipeline of thermal power plants is of \sim 8.5GW, (worth \sim INR1trn), over next 12-18 months. Note that as new projects get identified, the pipeline continues to become robust. NTPC is looking to award 7GW in standalone and 3GW in JVs over next two years. NLC plans to award 4GW over next 12 months.

Medium-term pipeline and longer-term outlook

The government (CEA) is expected to add 50GW of coal-based capacity – 25GW is being set up and another 25GW is expected over next 3-4 years. BHEL expects to win 15-20GW worth INR 1.4trn-1.8trn). Note that 50GW of power plant will be >40 years old by FY32 necessitating a further build-up of coal power plants.

A set of other opportunities to improve prospects

During the quarter, BHEL booked a Vande Bharat order worth INR 130bn. As India proceeds with upgrading its trainsets to achieve semi-high speed aspirations, this order will be a stepping stone. BHEL has been able to garner INR 100bn-200bn orders from industry division in the last three years in absence of thermal orders.

Maintain BUY with TP of INR 120

We believe an order inflow of >INR 400bn over next three years will lead to rerating of the stock. As legacy orders get finish and execution on new projects starts, we expect, margins and profit to improve materially by FY26E. We maintain our BUY rating on the stock with an increased TP of INR 120 (earlier: INR 110).

Outlook and valuation

We estimate 50GW of coal based capacity to be >40 years old by FY32. India peak demand is expected to be 375GW by FY32 at 6% CAGR or 330GW at 5% CAGR. To meet this additional peak demand, government is looking to add 75GW of storage and add 50GW of thermal capacity. Note that power storage is still in a nascent stage of development and ~20% of operational thermal capacity will have aged to >40 years by 2032. In our opinion, India will therefore need to enhance its arsenal of thermal power plants to ensure smooth energy transition.

BHEL, in consortium with Titagarh Wagons, has won a Vande Bharat order worth INR 235bn to supply 80 trainsets and service them for 35 years thereafter. BHEL's share in the order is estimated at INR 150bn. We expect more Vande Bharat orders to come in the next 2-3 years where BHEL again stands to benefit from its experience.

BHEL has also developed a significant moat in defence orders and is the sole supplier of SRGM naval guns. In FY23, it won an order to supply 20 SRGM guns worth INR 38bn and expects a similar-size order in FY24 as well. It is working on defence indigenisation projects and hopes to participate in air defence guns, tanks and propulsion systems going forward.

We believe, with domestic thrust towards manufacturing and the company's efforts towards improving its balance sheet, BHEL's business can stage a strong turnaround given its strong technical track record. It is taking cost-control measures and working on reducing receivables, with an increased focus on cashflow.

We maintain our earnings estimates for FY24E and FY25E although, owing to improved outlook on coal-based thermal capacity addition and awarding in the medium term, we increase our target price to INR 120 (from INR 110) valuing the stock at 22x FY25E (earlier: 20x FY25E) EPS of INR 5.5. Maintain BUY.

Risks: 1) Delay in order inflows, and 2) no major improvement in execution of slow-moving orders.

Quarterly result highlights

- Revenue for the quarter grew 7% YoY to INR 50bn; revenue growth was equally contributed to by industry and power division with 8% YoY growth each.
- Gross profit grew 7% YoY to INR 16bn with a gross margin of 31% (flat YoY).
- However, EBITDA (loss) increased to INR 3.6bn (vs INR 1.7bn YoY); EBITDA loss increased on YoY basis owing to higher other expenses, which we believe is due to increased bought-out items.
- Other income grew 53% YoY to INR 1.2bn and finance cost grew 72% YoY to INR 1.7bn.
- As a result, quarterly loss was INR 3.5bn (vs INR 1.9bn YoY).

Indian coal-based capacity addition outlook

India has peak demand for 223GW and every summer it has to fall back on ad hoc measures to meet the peak demand. Not building new thermal power plant is bad for the grid security and the environment.

What India's vulnerability is

- India has a firm and reliable power generation capacity of 225GW and the peak power demand for FY24 came in May'23 at 223GW.
- Thus every year during the summer months, India takes up new measures to meet peak power demand.
- However, a large spike in peak power demand going forward will lead to increased peak power deficit and India will be back to scheduled power cuts to meet the rising demand.

How much coal-based capacity is India expected to add till FY30

- India is expected to add 50GW of coal-based thermal capacity in the next 7 years.
- Of this 50GW, 25GW is still under construction and new thermal orders of 25GW are expected in the medium term.
- Given BHEL's dominant position in thermal power, we expect it to be a major beneficiary and to win a large chunk of these orders going forward.

Who is adding the incremental thermal capacity

- NTPC has 7GW of capacity on standalone basis and expects to award the same in the next 2-3 years.
- NTPC under a JV is working on 3GW
- NLC is working on 4GW Talabira and Nevelli
- Coal India is working on 3GW
- DVC is working on 6GW

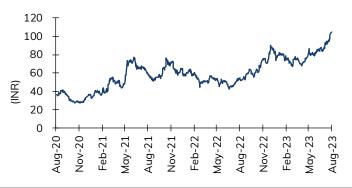

Besides, states are working actively on 4GW
