Fila and Foot Locker to add next leg of growth

Strong execution

The discretionary category has seen weak demand trends in the last few quarters, but METRO has continued to post industry-leading growth, led by steady footprint expansion. Although it could face moderation in SSSG and margin rebase in the near term, we expect the company to deliver secular 20% growth over the next five years, driven by its strong execution prowess evident from superlative store economics, a huge runway of footprint addition, excellent cashflow and ROIC profile, and new brand additions.

Steady store economics

METRO has a history of robust store economics with 2x revenue productivity (~INR25k revenue per sq. ft.) vs. Bata. It generates store-level EBITDA margin of ~25%, which results in a superior payback period of less than two years. The right store size, a wide product portfolio (with upcoming Fila and Foot Locker), and premiumization (2x ASP vs. Bata) help METRO achieve healthy store economics.

Huge footprint growth opportunity with internal accruals

METRO is expected to generate strong OCF (pre Ind-AS 116) of INR6b over FY24-25E, which can enable the company to fund the addition of over 250 stores per year. Moreover, its robust store economics, the addition of new formats in the pipeline (Fila and Foot Locker), and its 10-year track record of consistent store additions give us enough confidence in its ability to drive growth from internal accruals. With the addition of Fila and Foot Locker, the company has enabled seven formats to drive scale. Metro Brands has 795 stores across 5 formats in 189 cities against Bata's has around 2,150 stores in 725 cities, highlighting the huge growth potential ahead. We factor 21% revenue CAGR over FY24-26E led by 13% footprint CAGR.

Tapping growth through new brands

Fila and Foot Locker offers new growth engines. While Fila, in the near term, plans to focus on re-energizing its business by clearing the inventory. In the next three to five years, both brands could see about 400-500 store additions similar to the top sportswear brands in India, like Puma, Adidas, and Sketchers. With average revenue per store of INR20-30m (similar to Metro stores), both brands could garner about INR8-10b revenue from EBOs, online and other channels. Thus, METRO has an opportunity to leverage both brands in India to potentially generate INR15-20b in sales in the next three to five years, garnering about 50% of consol. revenue with ~20% pre Ind-AS EBITDA margin and ~15% PAT margin.

Valuation

METRO trades at rich valuations, at P/E of 55x on FY26 estimates, backed by: 1) a strong runway for growth, largely funded through internal sources, given its strong OCF-to-EBITDA ratio of over 50%; and b) superior store economics reflected in the balance sheet and a healthy RoIC of +50%. We believe the incremental opportunity in Fila and Foot Locker can further accelerate growth for METRO, which is not captured in the valuation. We factor in 21%/26% growth in revenue/EBITDA for FY24-26E and assign, PE of 60x on FY26E PAT of METRO's existing portfolio. We have not factored Fila and Foot Locker earnings, but we believe they have revenue potential of INR15-20b over the next 3-5 years (i.e. 30-40% share of Metro). Since both the brands are at initial stage of investing, we value Fila/Foot Locker at a ~75% discount to the potential value which creates an option value of INR160 (Exhibit 2), thus arriving at a valuation of INR1,530 per share.

Steady store economics

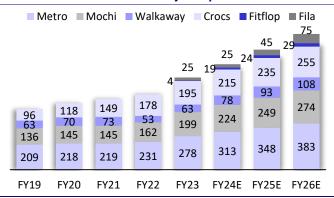

- METRO's has built a successful EBO model with 2x revenue productivity vs. Bata.
- A Metro store generates average revenue of ~INR25k/sq. ft. with ASP of ~INR1,450. Its store-level EBITDA margin of ~25% and capex, including inventory, of ~INR9.5k/sq.ft. translated into a superior payback period of 2.1 years (Exhibit 3).
- Healthy store economics are driven by factors like: a) right store size, b) wide product basket (with upcoming Fila and Foot Locker), which caters to family audience, c) premium products (2x ASP vs Bata), and d) prioritizing productivity over store costs (incentivizing staff and ideal store locations). This, in turn, gives a leg up to its growth initiatives.

Huge opportunity to grow footprint

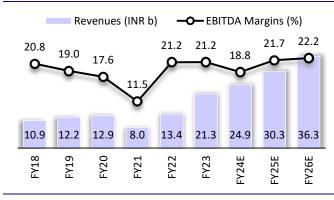

The following factors give us confidence in METRO's ability to drive growth:

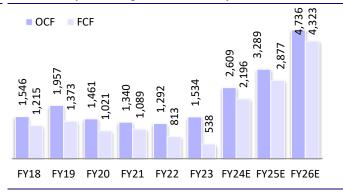

- a) Strong OCF of INR6b over FY24-25E could fund the addition of over 250 stores p.a.
- b) The management's intent to grow its footprint by double-digits
- c) Robust store economics
- d) Addition of new formats in the pipeline- Fila and Foot Locker
- e) Its last 10-year track record of consistent store additions

We factor in a 13% footprint CAGR to drive a 21% revenue CAGR over FY24-26E.

Growing through new brands

Fila and Foot Locker have the potential to roll out 400-500 stores each, as top sportswear brands in India, like Puma, Adidas, and Sketchers, have 400-500 stores.

A. FILA: addition to METRO's sportswear portfolio

- Earlier a part of Cravatex- Fila in India was a part of the Cravatex group (till 2022) with limited presence, compared to the top MNC sportswear brands such as Puma, Adidas, Nike, and Sketchers dominating India sportswear market.
- > Despite FILA enjoying a strong brand recall globally, other competitors in India have managed to reach an annual revenue of INR8-12b in FY20, much above Fila's sales numbers in India. (see exhibit 10).
- Fila's FY20/FY22 revenue was mere INR1.5b/INR2.6b, respectively.
- Strong brand recall in the global market- Globally, particularly in the US, South Korea, and China, Fila has been well-recognized brand with a cumulative revenue of USD10.9b as of FY22. (see exhibit 11).
- Under the Metro Brand, Fila could expect revival in brand salience, given Metro's ability to nurture high ASP brands.

Way forward-

- > Fila's near-term focus is on re-energizing the business by clearing the existing inventory by FY24.
- METRO targets to relaunch the brand in FY25 by leveraging METRO's existing stores, and looking at Fila's progression, the company will start adding Fila stores.

- > We expect, in the next three to five years, the company may add around 400-500 Fila stores. With average revenue per store of around INR20-25m, Fila could generate about INR8-10b in revenue through EBOs, online and other channels.
- Apparel: It is a new product category for METRO; hence, it may have to initially leverage the footwear market in building its customer base. But considering the size of the non-footwear business of other sportswear brands, it certainly could be a good opportunity in the future.
- Increase in blended ASP: Metro-blended ASP ranges between INR1,400 and INR1,500, and Fila's ASP ranges between INR3,000 and INR3,500. The higher ASP range of Fila could lift Metro-blended ASP.

B. Foot Locker: addition to METRO's sneakers portfolio

- Foot Locker is a New York-headquartered footwear and apparel retailer operating in 26 countries with 2,600 multi- brand retail stores (MBO) and around 184 franchised stores in the Middle East and Asia. (see exhibit 13 for summary financials)
- > It operates under five brands" 1) Foot Locker (1,588 stores), 2) Kids Foot Locker (410 stores), 3) Champs Sports, 4) WSS, and 5) atmos. (see exhibit 12 for revenue mix amongst formats)
- > FL curates special product assortments and marketing content that support premium position from brands such as Nike, Jordan, Adidas, and Puma, as well as new and emerging brands in the athletic and lifestyle space.
- Nike contribute around 65% of total sales, while the top 5 brands contribute 86% of supplies.
- Average store size would be 2-2.5x of Metro/Mochi Foot Locker's average store size in the US is ~3,200sqft and its international stores have an average size of ~2,000sqft. Kids Foot Locker stores have an average size of ~ 1,900sqft. In India. METRO could test customer response by initially opening stores in urbancentric locations (Metro and Tier 1), with potential to roll out 400-500 stores.
- Targets ASP of +INR5,000: Foot Locker's average store size, ASP, and revenue per store will be higher than that of Metro/Mochi. With Foot Locker's revenue per store of INR25-30m, METRO has an opportunity to leverage the Foot Locker brand in India to potentially generate INR8-10b in sales in the next three to five years.
- ➤ Higher EBITDA/store: Foot Locker's gross margins would be lower than METRO's margin of ~55-57%, but higher revenue and operating leverage due to existing backbone, POS, loyalty system, marketing, ERP, store BD team and supply chain would help it generate more absolute EBITDA per store.
- Inventory management: Nike is the largest contributor in Foot Locker. The inventory is divided into three categories:
 - 1. Exclusive products: Exclusive products account for 10%-20% of Foot Locker's inventory. Foot Locker only makes these products.
 - 2. Expensive premium products, like Air Jordan, are scarcity-driven products and only have limited volumes. They are available in all countries and account for 40-50% of Foot Locker's inventory.
 - 3. The remaining 40% of inventory could be available in all stores. The company will source the inventory directly from the merchandise.

- Hence, Fila and Foot Locker could add ~INR15-20b or ~50% of METRO's consol.
 revenue, with GM/EBITDA margin/PAT margin of ~50%/~20%/~15%. (see Exhibit 14)
- We have not factored Fila and Foot Locker earnings, but we believe they have revenue potential of INR15-20b over the next 3-5 years (i.e. 30-40% share of Metro).
- > Since both the brands are at initial stage of investing, we value Fila/Foot Locker at a discount of ~75% discount to the potential value which creates an option value of INR160 (Exhibit 2)
- > As the execution, plays out we see more upside for the two brands.

Lean balance sheet; cash generation remains robust

- Focus on building an asset-light model: METRO operates via leased stores and aims to turn profitable in the first year itself. The management believes that if a retail store loses money in the first year itself, it is a challenge to turn it around as costs go up every year.
- Strong store economics: An average store contributes INR25-30m in revenue i.e. 2.5x asset turnover with a realization of ~INR1,450. The controlled cost of retailing leads to store-level margin of ~25%, which works out to a store EBITDA of INR6.5-7.5m and a payback of ~2 years.
- Expansion capability: The store addition could be done through internal accruals with average capex of about INR10m-12m per store vs. METRO's average OCF of INR6b p.a. in FY24-25E and a strong net-cash balance sheet.
- The OCF generation implies an average 450-500 store additions in a year. We factor in 110-120 store adds p.a.
- On a base of 817/874 stores in 2QFY24/FY24E, the company has ability to expand footprints by 20% annually, given that
 - a. Seven formats (including Fila, Foot Locker) will be expanded to cities where the Metro format has average 200-300 stores,
 - b. It has presence in 189 cities vs. Bata's presence in 725 cities with ~2,150 stores,
 - c. OCF implies 450-500 store adds by internal accruals,
 - d. Strong store economics
